*Strings of harps and bows,
The charity of the cherubim,
Resound in lovers souls,
In Eros's piercing arrows,
And the stricken hearts of men.*

*Wings, feathered and fiery,
The charism of the seraphim,
Lift her song and diary
As free as elves in faerie
And all the choirs in heaven.*

*High the romance of lovers' fate
That angels do coordinate.*

-Excerpt from The Beauty of a Titian

Saint Valentine, throned aloft,
Thus little birds sing for your sake:
Welcome, summer, with sunshine soft,
The winter's tempest you will shake!

-Geoffrey Chaucer, Parliament of Fowls
